THE coast was discovered by Giovanni de Verrazano, a Florentine navigator, who anchored his vessel in April, 1524, near the point of land now called Sandy Hook, and afterwards entered the bay and river. French adventurers, Ranlin Seculart and Jean Alphonse, about the year 1545 visited the same waters, and probably built works on Castleton Island below Albany, and it is claimed that a trace of the ruins may be seen.

The English title was partly based on the discovery of the North American coast by John Cabot, June 24, 1497, recorded on maps by his son, Sebastian. The "Half Moon," a Dutch vessel, commanded by Hendrick Hudson, an Englishman in the service of the Dutch East India Company, seeking a western passage to China, anchored September 3, 1609, in the lower bay, and eight days later "went into the river," now the Hudson. On September 19, the "Half Moon" anchored at the point where Albany now stands. Dutch merchants commissioned a ship in the summer of 1610, for trade to New Netherland, and in 1612 other vessels were sent for the same object.

A few huts were built on the southern point of Manhattan Island, and were the beginning of New Amsterdam. Even earlier, Hendrick Christiaensen had erected a strong house on the west bank of the Hudson, just below Albany, and called it Fort Nassau, but it was abandoned in 1617.

In 1621, the Dutch West India Company succeeded the earlier traders. The first colony came to New Netherland under the auspices of this company in 1623. Eight men were left on Manhattan Island, and others settled on the west shore of Long Island. Other vessels followed, and in 1625 the population had increased to two hundred.

Geo. H. Walker & Co., Boston. PILGRIM STATUE.

The next year the government of the settlement was made more important, with Peter Minuit as director-general, assisted by a committee of five. He purchased of the Indians, Manhattan Island, for small wares and goods valued at twenty-four dollars. In 1628, the village was named Fort Amsterdam, and a fort was erected of the same name near the Bowling Green in 1635, and was standing up to 1791.

In 1633, Director-General Wouter Van Twiller arrived in Manhattan, bringing with him a company of soldiers, the first to arrive in the province. The earliest defences were at Pearl Street, "the Road to the Ferry," and consisted of a blockhouse and a two-gun battery. The Slip Battery of ten guns was near Coenties Slip. The Stadt Huys Battery of five guns; the Whitehall Battery of fifteen guns. The Stadt Huys (City Hall) stood on the site of No. 73 Pearl Street.

Bowling Green was the first parade ground, village green, and used for all outdoor public occasions. Here, in 1658, was the first marketplace.

In 1631, the ship "New Netherland," of eight hundred tons, mounting ten guns, was built in the Manhattan shipyard.

Pearl Street, the oldest in the city, was built in 1633, and Bridge Street was soon laid out.

In 1653, the West India Company incorporated New Amsterdam as a city, then having one thousand inhabitants and one hundred and twenty houses.

In 1655, negroes were purchased from the slave ships, and resold to Virginia planters.

The first Custom House stood at the corner of State and Whitehall streets, during the administration of Peter Stuyvesant.

In 1664, Colonel Nicols, the personal representative of the Duke of York, arrived in the bay with an English fleet, and forced the Dutch to surrender Manhattan Island. He set up a government, and summoned two delegates from each town to consider a code,—"the Duke's Laws,"—which was accepted, as the colony were powerless to do otherwise. The Dutch reconquered the island in 1673, but the conquest was not known to the States-General when the Treaty of Westminster was signed, providing for the restoration by England and Holland of all lands captured during the war. On October 15, 1674, orders reached Colve, the director-general, to give up New Netherland. The transfer of the province from the Dutch took place November 9, 1674. Major Edmund Andros, the new governor of the territories of the Duke of York in America, took possession.

In 1683, Thomas Dongan was governor, afterwards Earl of Limerick. Benjamin Fletcher was governor from 1692 to 1698, and was succeeded by the Earl of Bellomont.

In 1692, the first post office was established.

CITY HALL AND PARK.

In 1693, the first printing press used.

In 1709, slave market at foot of Wall Street.

From 1710 to 1719, Robert Hunter was governor.

1732, first stage from New York to Boston.

In 1741, "Negro Plot." A large number of negroes and a Catholic priest were unjustly executed by the deluded populace.

From 1743 to 1753, Admiral George Clinton was governor.

In 1752, the Royal Exchange was opened on Broad street.

In 1751, trustees were appointed by the Assembly to take charge of funds raised for a college.

In 1752, Trinity Church offered to give land for the college.

In 1754, King's College received its charter, and the building was erected, 1756-60, on college land, between Barclay, Church, and Murray streets, and College Place.

The "Sons of Liberty" opposed the Stamp Act in 1765, and burned the effigy of the English governor on Bowling Green.

The statue of George III, which stood on the Bowling Green up to the time of the commencement of the revolutionary acts, was pulled down by the patriots and destroyed.

The Chamber of Commerce was incorporated in 1770.

In 1774, the ship "Nancy" was not allowed to land her cargo of tea.

At the evacuation of Boston by the British army, Washington marched his forces to New York, and on July 19, 1776, the Declaration of Independence was read to the troops.

In August, a large fleet of vessels arrived in the bay with an army of thirty-one thousand men, under Howe, Clinton, Cornwallis, and Hessian officers. The British army was landed, and defeated Putnam's army at Brooklyn. At Harlem Heights the Americans defeated the British in several encounters, and finally retired into Westchester. At this time a fire broke out in the city, which destroyed four hundred and ninety-three houses.

✓ In November, General Howe's army stormed the works of Fort Washington, taking prisoners the garrison. From this time the British held possession of the city until the end of the war.

On November 25, 1783, the rear guard of the British army left the battery, and the American army under Washington, with Clinton and other general officers, marched into the city. At Fraunce's Tavern, corner of Broad and Pearl streets, Washington bade farewell to his officers.

City Hall Park was, in the early days of New York, much larger than at present, and extended beyond Duane Street, and in 1785 the "Bridewell," "Almshouse," the "New Jail," and the "Gallows" stood near Chambers Street. The jail is now the Hall of Records, near the bridge, but all the other buildings are gone. The present City Hall was built on the park in 1803-1812.

In 1786, the first city directory had eight hundred and forty-six names.

The first American Congress under the Constitution met in 1789 in the old City Hall, corner of Wall and Broad streets. On April 30, 1789, Livingston, chancellor of the State of New York, administered the oath of office to Washington, first President of the United States.

On July 11, 1804, occurred the fatal duel between Alexander Hamilton, the distinguished soldier of the Revolution and the first Secretary of the Treasury, and Aaron Burr, Vice-President of the United States. Burr mortally wounded Hamilton, and he died the next day.

In the War of 1812, the city and forts in the harbor were held by a garrison of twenty-three thousand men, and a large number of privateers were sent out.

The "Clermont," the first steamer, was built in 1807, by Robert Fulton, inventor, and made a trip from New York to Albany.

The first steamer, the "Phœnix," for ocean service, was built by Col. John Stevens of Hoboken in 1807, and made the passage from New York to Philadelphia.

The "Savannah," a steamer built in New York, was the first steam vessel to cross the Atlantic.

In 1824, General Lafayette welcomed.

October 26, 1825, the Erie Canal was completed.

The Croton Aqueduct was begun in 1835, and water was introduced into the city in 1842; the works completed in 1845. The watershed of lakes and reservoirs is about thirty-five miles from the city.

In December, 1835, the lower part of the city was burned, seven hundred buildings and twenty million dollars' worth of property being destroyed.

GREATER NEW YORK.

The city now consists of five boroughs, Manhattan (Island), the Bronx (north of East River), Brooklyn, Queens (suburbs of Brooklyn), and Richmond (Staten Island).

The consolidation of these municipalities into one great city of three hundred and twenty square miles and three million population was accomplished by the affirmative vote of the people in 1894; a charter was granted by the State in 1896, and went into effect January 1, 1898.

Population of New York from early settlement to present time—all the boroughs being included in the years 1898, 1899, and 1900—is as follows:—

son, erected in 1893, stands on the park. The park was the site of the original New Amsterdam, and at an early date a battery was built, and was rebuilt at the time of the Revolution. In 1805 a fort was completed and named Fort Clinton, and is the same now known as Castle Garden.

Castle Garden was erected as a fort in 1805 by the United States government and was then some distance from the mainland. The waterway between was afterward filled in. In 1822 the fort, then known as Castle Clinton, was ceded to New York City. The building was used as a theatre and opera-house up to 1855, when the city government occupied the place as a depot for immigrants.

The Aquarium at Castle Garden is open to the public without charge.

American Tract Society, 150 Nassau Street, was organized in 1825.

The American Seamen's Friend Society, 70 Wall Street, was established in 1828.

The first tavern in New York was a stone building, near what is now Pearl Street and Coenties Slip. Built in 1642.

Martin Krigler built his tavern at Bowling Green in 1643. The house was afterwards known as the King's Arm Tavern, and in Revolutionary days was the headquarters of General Gage.

Burns's Coffee-House, on Broadway, north of Trinity Churchyard, was on the site of the Boreel Building.

A theatre was built in 1761, at Nassau and Beekman streets, where Temple Court now stands.

The John Street Theatre was built on the north side of John Street in 1767, near Broadway. It was taken down in 1798.

Bull's Head Tavern was in Bowery Lane.

Nassau Street Theatre was built on the east side of the town, then called Kip, between John Street and Maiden Lane. Built of wood and opened March 5, 1750. The first playhouse erected in New York. In 1753 another theatre was built on its site, and was in a few years used as a church. It was torn down in 1765.

La Montagne Tavern was opposite the present City Hall Park.

Park Theatre was on the site of Nos. 21 to 25 Park Row. It was opened January 29, 1798, and burned May 25, 1820. It was rebuilt in 1821 and again destroyed by fire December 16, 1848. All the great actors of this country, and those from abroad, played in this theatre the first half of the nineteenth century.

The Merchants' Coffee-House was at the corner of Water and Wall streets.

Fraunce's Tavern, originally the homestead of the DeLancey family, was a brick building, erected in 1730 at the corner of Pearl and Broad streets. The estate was sold in 1762 to Samuel Fraunce, who opened it as a tavern and named it the Queen Catharine. It was well patronized by the townspeople for social gatherings. The Chamber of Commerce for many years had headquarters at the tavern. Washington, while in New York, made it his headquarters, and in the assembly room delivered his farewell address to the officers of the Continental Army in 1783.

French's Hotel occupied the site of the Pulitzer Building.

Golden Eagle Inn stood until 1893 back of the Broadway Central Hotel.

Society for Promoting the Gospel Among Seamen in the Port of New York, 46 Catharine Street, was founded in 1818. The Mariners' church, library, and reading-room is maintained by the society.

The Old Dutch Vauxhall was at the corner of Warren and Greenwich streets.

Salvation Army. Headquarters, 111 Reade Street. Barracks for meetings are located in different parts of the city.

Vauxhall was on Broadway near Broome Street.

The Bank Clearing House, Cedar Street, east of Broadway, was occupied by the Clearing House Association in January, 1896. It was built of marble, and is one of the finest buildings in the city.

Newspapers. The first was the Gazette, printed from 1725 to 1741; The Weekly Journal, 1733-1746; Evening Post, 1746-1747; Independent Reflector, 1752-1754; Mercury, 1752-1783; Pacquet, 1753-1767; American Chronicle, 1761-1762; The New York Journal, 1766-1787; The Argus, 1787-1800; American Citizen, 1800-1810; Chronicle, 1766; New Gazetteer, or The Connecticut, New Jersey, Hudson's River, and Quebec Weekly Advertiser, 1773-1775; Rivingston's New York Loyal Gazette, 1777-1783; Constitutional Gazette, 1775; The American Watchman, 1800-1810; New York Packet and The American Advertiser, 1776; New York Daily Advertiser, 1785; Independent Journal, 1787; Gazette, 1788-1840; United States Gazette, 1789-1790; Minerva, 1793; The Commercial Advertiser, 1797; The Evening Post, 1801; and the Currier Mercantile Advertiser, Columbian, and National Advocate were all published near the beginning of the nineteenth century. The prominent papers at the present time are the Tribune, Herald, Sun, World, Times, News, Press, Journal, Mail and Express, Evening Post, Commercial Advertiser, and Staats Zeitung.

Military Order of the Loyal Legion of the United States has its headquarters at the Morse Building, 140 Nassau Street.

Bar Association of New York, Bar Association Building, No. 42 West Forty-fourth Street.

The Lawyers' Club, 120 Broadway.

New York Stock Exchange, Broad and New streets. The building is of marble and granite.

UNITED STATES SUB-TREASURY AND ASSAY BUILDING.

Subtreasury of the United States is on Wall Street, corner of Nassau Street, and extending to Pine Street. The site was originally where the City Hall stood when it was occupied by the first Congress of the United States in 1789, and, as Federal Hall, was the scene of the first inauguration. Congress abandoned the building when it assembled at Philadelphia. The building was used afterwards by the government as the Custom House, and was torn down in 1834. The present building was completed in 1841, and was occupied as the Custom House until 1862, when the old Merchants Exchange Building was taken for the Custom House and the Subtreasury occupied the building. It is constructed of stone, of Greek style, with eight large columns supporting the porch, and has stone steps the width of the front of the building. In the centre of the steps is the heroic-sized bronze statue of Washington, unveiled November 26, 1883. Set in the pedestal is a slab of red sandstone that formed part of the flooring of the balcony of Federal Hall when Washington, standing on this identical stone in the balcony on this spot, took the oath of office as first President of the United States, April 30, 1789.

United States Assay Office. The building on Wall Street adjoining the Subtreasury; a branch of the United States Mint Building; built in 1823; has been occupied by the assay office since 1853.

Coffee Exchange, corner of Pearl and Beaver streets, was organized in 1882.

Consolidated Petroleum and Stock Exchange, corner of Broadway and Exchange Place.

The Middle Dutch Church, Nassau Street, of ancient Dutch style, with wooden steeple, stood on the site of the Mutual Life Building, and was erected in 1729. The church was used as a prison by the English during the Revolution, and more than three thousand of the American army were confined there. The old church was sold in 1844 to the United States government, and was used for a while as the post-office.

The Bronze Statue of Nathan Hale, the martyr of the Revolution, stands on City Hall Park, near Broadway and Wall Street, and was erected by the Sons of the Revolution in 1893.

Burton's Chambers Street Theatre, originally Palmer's Opera House, was opened February 4, 1844, for grand opera. It was occupied by Christy's Minstrels during the summer of 1846, and leased by Burton, July, 1848. It was afterwards named the American Theatre. In 1857 it was leased to the United States government and occupied for offices. The building was sold in January, 1876, and the site is now occupied by the American News Company.

Free Circulating Library was founded in 1880. It has four buildings: 49 Bond Street, 135 Second Avenue, 226 West Forty-second Street, and 251 West Thirteenth Street. It was incorporated on March 15, 1880, and reincorporated April 18, 1884. The library has more than seventy-five thousand volumes. It has received large donations of books and money from citizens, and yearly grants of money from the city.

New York College of Dentistry, Twenty-third Street and Third Avenue, was chartered in 1866.

Barnum's Museum was opened on Chambers Street in 1810, where the Court House now stands. Scudder's American Museum was purchased in 1841, and the curiosities removed to Broadway and Ann Street, where the New York Herald Building stands, by P. T. Barnum. It was partly burned in 1864, and was destroyed by fire, July, 1865. It was then established at 539-541 Broadway, and burned March 3, 1868. It opened again on south side Fourteenth Street, and was burned December 24, 1872.

Astor Place Opera House was opened November 22, 1847. Here took place the Macready riot on May 9, 1849. It was renamed the New York Theatre in 1852. In 1854 it was sold to the Mercantile Library Association, and named Clinton Hall. In 1890 the building was demolished and the new Clinton Hall and Mercantile Library building erected on the site.

Brougham's Lyceum Theatre on Broadway near Broome Street was opened December, 1850. It was named Wallack's Theatre in 1855, and torn down in 1869.

The Kennedy House was built in 1760, afterwards the Washington House. It stood where the Washington Building now stands, No. 1 Broadway. It was General Putnam's headquarters previous to the battle of Long Island, and was occupied at different times by Lord Howe, Lord Cornwallis, Sir Henry Clinton, Benedict Arnold, and Talleyrand.

Tripler Hall, on Broadway opposite Bond Street, was burned January 8, 1854. It was rebuilt and opened September 18 as the New York Theatre and Opera House. Within a few years it bore the names of Laura Keane's Varieties, Burton's Theatre, and Winter Garden Building in 1864. It was destroyed by fire, March 23, 1867.

Chamber of Commerce, 32 Nassau Street. Organized April 5, 1768. Incorporated March 13, 1770. Reincorporated by State of New York, April 13, 1784.

THE OLD TOMBS PRISON.

Elevated Railways, Manhattan Railway Co. Trains of cars drawn by locomotives run every two or three minutes on the four main double-track lines and branches. At the terminal station, South Ferry, near the Battery, these lines come together. Two of these lines are on the West Side and two on the East Side, all continuing to the Harlem River, and the Suburban runs to One Hundred and Seventy-second Street. The Ninth Avenue line, built in 1870, extends from the Battery to Fifty-ninth Street, where it joins the Sixth Avenue line. The Sixth Avenue line, West Side from South Ferry. The Third Avenue line from South Ferry. The Second Avenue line from Chatham Square. The City Hall branch station at the New York terminus of the Brooklyn Bridge at City Hall.

New York Rapid Transit. The rapid-transit act permits the city to issue bonds to the amount of $50,000,000 during the construction of the road, and the cost of building must not exceed that amount. Also for the formation of a rapid-transit construction company which shall build and operate the road. A cash bond of $1,000,000 is to be paid the city as a guarantee for the faithful construction of the work. The franchise is granted to the company for fifty years, then the city takes possession of the road without cost. The company is to pay an annual interest of three per cent on the city bonds after the road is in operation.

The contract for the entire construction of the line has been made with John B. McDonald for $35,000,000, and work began March 20, 1900, at the corner of Greene and Bleecker streets, when William B. Parsons, chief engineer of the rapid-transit commission, struck the first blow in the construction of the tunnel by using a pick to remove the first stone.

The line begins at City Hall Park and is the first section, and here the railway will be two stories, running in a loop around the park. The express tracks will be on the lower level, so that the line may be extended later to the Battery without crossing the local lines. Where the double track is located, the lower level will be forty feet below the surface.

Near the entrance to the Brooklyn Bridge the two lower tracks will return to the level of the others, and from Thirtieth Street the four tracks will run on a level, the two inner tracks for express trains. The most difficult point of excavation will be near Canal Street, being made ground, and heavy retaining walls will be built.

On Fourth Avenue the electric surface tracks will be moved to one side of the street during the excavation, and will be replaced when the work is done. At Thirtieth Street the line will make two sections, each with two lines of track, running outside and below the street-car tunnel through Murray Hill. At Forty-first Street the two branches will unite in a four-track line, turning to westward beneath Forty-second Street. Here there will be four levels, one above another. The lowest level will be the rapid-transit express and the local trains. The level above will be for the street-car line from the subway. The next level will be the roadway of Park Avenue, and above that will be the branch of the Third Avenue elevated.

Crossing beneath Fifth Avenue the line will run through Forty-second Street to Broadway, where it will run to Ninety-sixth Street. At this point the tracks will separate, two running down to One Hundred and Third Street, where they will turn east, under the outer track through to One Hundred and Fourth Street, across the corner of Central Park, up Lenox Avenue to the Harlem River at One Hundred and Forty-first Street. The other tracks run up Broadway. At Westchester Avenue the line will leave the tunnel and run upon an elevated structure to Bronx Park, the terminus.

On the West Side the two tracks will run underground to One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street, where they come to the surface and cross Manhattan Valley on a viaduct at One Hundred and Thirty-fifth Street. At this point they will go through a tunnel to Eleventh Avenue above One Hundred and Ninetieth Street. From Ellwood Street to Kingsbridge the line will run on the surface.

The estimated time from City Hall to Ninety-sixth Street is thirteen minutes by express and twenty-one by local trains. From City Hall to Bronx Park or Kingsbridge forty-five minutes.

ENTRANCE TO BROOKLYN BRIDGE.

BROOKLYN.

Brooklyn was named for Breuckelen (Marshland) in the province of Utrecht in Holland, from which place some of the first settlers came. A tract of six hundred and thirty acres of land was purchased of the Algonquin Indians in 1636 by William Arianse Bennet and Jaques Bentyn lying at Gowanus. A second tract of three hundred and twenty-five acres of land was purchased by Joris Jansen de Rapalje at Wallabout Bay, June 16, 1637. In 1642 there were at the west end of the island five hamlets, "The Ferry;" "Breuckelyn," near the present Hoyt and Fulton streets, where stood the church; "Gowanus," around Gowanus Bay; "Bedford;" and "The Wallabout," around Wallabout Bay. The union of the five hamlets into one village called Breuckelen took place in 1646.

In 1653 it received a Dutch charter, and in 1665 an English charter. In 1788 the town was organized, and it was incorporated April 12, 1816. It was incorporated as a city April 8, 1834. The ground on which the city is built rises with a steep grade from the bay and river to a ridge which extends eastward. At its highest point it is about seventy-five feet above tide water, and affords an extensive view of the bay.

The sections of the city are designated The Heights, South Brooklyn, The Hill, and Williamsburg. Fulton Street is the main avenue. Half a mile from the bridge are located the Court House, Hall of Records, the Municipal Building, and the City Hall. On Washington Street stands the Federal Building, with the post office and United States courts.

The Hill. The Republican Union League Club, the Lincoln, the Oxford, and the Montauk clubs have fine houses.

The Heights. Here are located the Academy of Music, Young Men's Christian Association building, Brooklyn Library, and Art Association. Long Island Historical Society building is on the corner of Clinton and Pierrepont streets, and has a library of eighty thousand volumes and many pamphlets. The Mansion House, the St. George, and the Pierrepont House are also in this section. The Brooklyn, Hamilton, and Excelsior clubs and the Crescent Athletic Club have fine headquarters.

Prospect Park, Brooklyn, contains 516 1-6 acres of woodland, water, lawn, and driveways, laid out in the natural style. From Lookout Hill may be seen the Palisades, the Orange Hills, the Atlantic shore, the city of Brooklyn, and New York Harbor. A bronze tablet marks the site of part of the battle of Long Island, which was fought on the hills of the park and the immediate surrounding ground. A statue erected in memory of John Howard Payne, author of "Home, Sweet Home," stands in the park. A bronze statue erected in memory of Major-General G. K. Warren stands near the memorial arch, and was unveiled July 4, 1896. There are also a bronze statue of J. S. T. Stranahan, and bronze busts of Beethoven, Irving, and Thomas Moore and a heroic bronze statue of Abraham Lincoln.

The Park Plaza, in front of the main entrance to Prospect Park. In the centre of the plaza stands a memorial arch, erected in memory of the soldiers and sailors of the Federal army in 1892.

STATEN ISLAND.

The land is broken by hills, affording fine views of the harbor and interior.

Tottenville is the most southern town on the island. Richmond was formerly the county town. Arthur Kill and the sound separate the island from New Jersey.

Stapleton is the quarantine station, and St. George, Tompkinsville, Clifton and Gifford's are on the east side of the island. South Beach is a summer resort and Midland Beach is a new resort.

Other towns and villages are West New Brighton, Port Richmond, Erastina, Chelsea, Travisville, Rossville, Eltingville, Prince's Bay, Huguenot, and Red Bank.

Prohibition Park (Westerleigh), a village recently built by Dr. I. K. Funk and others.

Sailors' Snug Harbor, West New Brighton, on the north shore of the island. Here is the home for aged and infirm sailors. The grounds have an area of one hundred and eighty-five acres. It was founded by Captain Richard Randall. The large buildings are occupied by seven hundred and fifty pensioners. The remains of the founder rest under a monument on the grounds, and a bronze statue of Captain Randall stands in a prominent section of the ground.

The Huguenot Graveyard. The Vanderbilt tomb, a large marble structure, is in this ground.

THE HARBOR OF NEW YORK

Comprises the lower bay, the upper bay, the East River, and the southern part of the North or Hudson River, and may be entered from the Atlantic Ocean either from the northeast by way of Long Island Sound, or from the east and south by way of the channels at Sandy Hook. The latter is the channel used by most of the ocean vessels.

The North River is nearly a mile wide, and deep enough for the largest vessel.

Geo. H. Walker & Co., Boston. HUDSON RIVER FROM TOP OF THE LIBERTY BUILDING.

The East River is about half a mile wide, but is as deep as North River.

The northeastern entrance to the harbor from Long Island Sound is through Hell Gate to the East River.

Pier Water Front of Manhattan Island are the North River, East River, and Harlem River, giving twenty-five miles of excellent wharf front for large vessels. The North River on the western front is the original name given to it by the Dutch settlers, and it is twenty miles long and one mile wide. East River is twenty miles long, connecting New York harbor near the Battery with Long Island Sound at Willett's Point. Harlem River is a tributary of the East River, and is seven miles long.

Bartholdi's Statue of Liberty, on Bedloe's Island, one and three quarters miles southwest of the Battery. This enormous statue of hammered copper is 151 feet high, and stands on a pedestal 155 feet high, standing within the walls of Fort Wood.

✧ Fort Wood, on Bedloe's Island, was completed in 1841.

✧ Governor's Island, near the Battery, is the headquarters of the Military Department of the East. It has an area of sixty-five acres. Fort Columbus is the principal work on the island. On the point is Castle William, facing the Battery, built 1808-1812. On the island are magazines, hospitals, and an arsenal.

✧ Robins Reef Lighthouse, a low brown tower, near the Staten Island shore.

Fort Hamilton, a military reservation of ninety-six acres, Gravesend Bay, Brooklyn. A large fort, casemated and heavily armed; also strong shore batteries. The guns command the Narrows and the approach from the bay.

The Narrows, one mile wide, is the water connection between the harbor and lower bay.

Fort Wadsworth, on the high point at the Narrows, is a military reservation of one hundred acres. This fort, with Fort Hamilton, commands the entrance to the harbor.

Fort Lafayette, located between Fort Hamilton and the water front. Its construction was begun in 1812 and was named in 1822 Fort Lafayette. It is constructed of brick, with high walls.

Willett's Point, near Whitestone, fortified in 1862 by the government.

Fort Totten, near Whitestone.

Fort Schuyler, Throgg's Neck, East River.

Fort Slocum, David's Island.

Quarantine Station, port of New York. At Swinburne Island is located the hospital for contagious diseases. At Hoffman's Island all passengers arriving in infected vessels are detained for some time to guard the public health.

Geo. H. Walker & Co., Boston.

HUDSON RIVER.

Sandy Hook is the long neck of land on the New Jersey shore. Sandy Hook and Scotland lightships are anchored off Sandy Hook. Navesink Highlands, the high shore between Navesink River and New York Bay, have two lighthouses.

Fort Hancock, Sandy Hook, very heavily armed fortifications.

Blackwell's Island, in East River, contains one hundred and twenty acres and was purchased by the city in 1828. Here are located the almshouse, penitentiary, charity hospital, workhouse, asylum for the insane, and other public institutions.

Randall's Island, near the union of the East River and Harlem River, contains one hundred acres. The House of Refuge was erected here in 1854.

Coney Island was formerly part of the town of Gravesend. It was annexed to Brooklyn some years ago. Here are Brighton and Manhattan beaches.

NEW JERSEY SHORE.

Jersey City, on the opposite shore, southwest from Manhattan Borough, has a population of 155,000. On the water front are situated the station of the Pennsylvania Railroad and the ferry landings for the ferries from New York. The Union Station for the electric-car lines is at the foot of Montgomery Street.

Hoboken is north of Jersey City and has a population of 45,000. The piers of a number of transatlantic steamer lines are on the water front. The station of the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad and branches and the ferries from New York are at this point. The Stevens Institute is on the banks of the river, and has ample grounds.

Weehawken, just north of Hoboken, is the terminus of the New York, West Shore & Buffalo and the Ontario & Western railroads. Here was fought the duel between General Alexander Hamilton and Aaron Burr, which resulted in the death of Hamilton. The city is connected with New York and Brooklyn by ferries.

Ocean Grove. In this shore town are held the camp meetings of the Methodist Church societies. The principal buildings are the Auditorium, Tabernacle, and the Young People's Temple. The Auditorium, erected by the Methodist Church for meetings of the societies, has a seating capacity of 9,500. The town has a number of fine hotels.

Asbury Park, near Ocean Grove, is a popular summer resort. The town has a good library and an opera house. There are a number of good hotels.

Long Branch, a shore summer resort, is reached by steamers of the Central Railroad of New Jersey and by rail.

HUDSON RIVER.

The Hudson River is navigable for steamers to Troy, but is closed in winter by ice.

Steamers run between New York and landings on the river as follows: Albany Day Line, landing Desbrosses Street; Albany People's Line (night), landing Canal Street; Catskill (Catskill Railroad), landing Christopher Street; Kingston (Ulster & Delaware Railroad), landing West Tenth Street; Troy Citizens' (night), West Tenth Street; Newburgh (Day Line), Desbrosses Street; Newburgh (Central Hudson Line), Franklin, West Tenth Street; Newburgh (Mary Powell), Desbrosses Street; Peekskill, West Tenth Street; West Point (Day Line), Desbrosses Street; West Point (Mary Powell), Desbrosses Street.

Many interesting historical places will be found in a trip up the river. Hoboken is soon passed, with Bergen Hill in the background, and Weehawken, Washington Heights, and Fort Lee and the Palisades. The Palisades, on the western side of the river, extend twenty miles and the great wall of rock is from 350 to 550 feet in height.

Yonkers, a city of 40,000 inhabitants, is connected with New York by railroad and steamboats.

Dobbs Ferry was the scene of many important acts of the Revolution.

Irvington is a short distance above Dobbs Ferry, and is reached by railroad and steamboat.

Sunnyside, just north of Irvington, was the home of Washington Irving.

Tarrytown, a beautiful village and famous for stirring scenes during the Revolution. Major André of the British army was captured here and executed as a spy.

Nyack, a village of some importance, is connected by railroad and steamboats with New York.

Sing Sing. Here is located the State Prison, which was established in 1826. The town has some 12,000 inhabitants, with many fine buildings.

Stony Point. Here took place one of the boldest and most successful military exploits of the Revolution—the storming of the works by General Wayne.

Peekskill has a population of about 12,000 and was also one of the towns along the river identified with the history of the Revolution. Major-General Seth Pomeroy and Paulding, one of the captors of Major André, are buried here.

West Point. Here is located the United States Military Academy, the famous school for the education of officers for the army, which was established in 1794. Numerous buildings occupy the spacious grounds. Besides the cadets, who number from 300 to 325, a large staff of instructors reside here. Many interesting relics of the revolutionary war, of 1812, 1848, and 1861-65, are treasured in the buildings and grounds.

The library contains about 35,000 volumes devoted to military affairs. The cemetery is a short distance from the academy, and here are buried Lieutenant-General Winfield Scott, Brigadier-General Anderson, who commanded Fort Sumter in 1861, Brigadier-General Custer, Major-General Sykes, and General Quincy A. Gilmore. Old Fort Putnam is on Mount Independence, 500 feet above the river level.

Newburgh was very prominent in the Revolution, and in 1782-83 Washington had his headquarters here in a house now standing. The city has a population of about 30,000.

Poughkeepsie. Here is located Vassar College, a noted institution of learning for girls.

Kingston has a population of about 31,000. The British burned the town October 16, 1777.

The Catskill Mountains are reached by railroad by several routes. These hills cover a large territory which is unsurpassed in scenery, and many beautiful estates have been laid out and high-cost residences built by residents of New York for summer homes.

Albany, the capital of the State of New York, is 145 miles from the city of New York, and has a population of about 125,000. The old capitol was completed in 1808, and in 1869 the present capitol was begun, and has cost more than $20,000,000. The State library contains 185,000 volumes.

NEW GUIDE

.. TO ..

Metropolitan Boston.

---

The "Guide to Metropolitan Boston," which George H. Walker & Co. have just published, is crammed full of facts worth knowing about all parts of the city. It describes and locates places of historic interest, and gives an outline of the important events and the memorable incidents connected with every spot of ground in the city. All the important buildings are described, with the date of their construction and other details; and the parks and parkways, the harbor, the park system, and the suburbs in all directions are described with sufficient fulness to enable the visitor from another city to know where everything is that is worth seeing. The book is equipped with a new map of Boston, showing all points of interest, hotels, theatres, and public buildings, as well as another map of the whole neighborhood; and it is full of excellent half-tones of important public buildings and other views that are worth preserving. It is a thoroughly practical and concise pocket guide.
